Position: Instructor for a two credit hour educational psychology course, delivered in a Hyflex (online and in-person) format.

Responsibilities: Teach a one-semester course for music education majors that focuses on describing and applying the principles of learning pertaining to the ways students think and learn. The course covers the study of the concepts, principles and theories of psychology related to learning, as well as the major theories of operant conditioning, observational learning, and cognitive learning. Theories of intellectual and social development are also reviewed.

Qualifications: An enthusiastic subject specialist with a minimum of a Master’s degree and successful past teaching experience.

Salary: Based on qualifications and experience

Appointment: Online and in-person instruction with the semester beginning August 23, 2021 and running through December 3, 2021. Final exam takes place the week of December 6th.

Application: Send email of inquiry along with CV to Stacey Larson Dolan, Undergraduate Dean sdolan@vandercook.edu

VanderCook College of Music is a small, specialized college granting undergraduate and graduate degrees in music education. As future school music teachers, students must be competent in their areas of music performance, as well as in their verbal and written communication.